NUMBER 3.

More Poultry Raisers.

Poultry raising in this vicinity is becoming more in favor with the people than in the past few years and each year there are more people entering into the business and making good at it.

George H. Austin is keeping about 125 this winter. Last fall he built a hen house 12x60 ft. and 6 ft. posted in rear and 8 ft. in front. This is divided into 4 sections, 2 sections 20x12 and 2, 10x12.

There is a large under 3 of the sections and is reached by a skittle from the corner, thus giving the hens a double amount of surface.

The roosts are fixed with hinges and can be closed back against the wall which makes it easy to keep the coops clean. These roosts are boarded to and the front left open and at night a canvas is rolled down over the opening.

Last spring Mr. Austin purchased a dozen white Orpington eggs from the Owen Farm at Vineyard Haven, Mass., and hatched out 8 chicks, 2 cockerels and six pullets. These are nice large pullets and average 3 to 5 eggs a day.

In another section are the Cecilias Buttercups, an exceptionally pretty bird, highly resembling a brown leghorn in size and color but different in marking. These were raised last spring from eggs purchased in Maryland and out of the 30 eggs, 25 live chicks were hatched. He has one hen which he brought in New York and is a trifle different from the pullets in color markings. It is estimated by authorities that these birds, average 300 eggs a year.

In the next section comes a cross between a White Wyandotte and Rhode Island Red. These are a fine light bird with a tinge of yellow and a dark speckled collar about the neck. There are 24 of them and they are a nice large bird.

Between a White Wyandotte and Rhode Island Red, Mr. Austin purchased these last spring when old chicks and has raised the entire flock, which now are good layers. He has some forty E. I. Reds in the basement under the barn, also several R. I. Red Coxs and a large White Orpington cock which he purchased recently from parties in Massachusetts.

Robert Senk has a flock of over a hundred Rhode Island Reds. Mr. Senk began with a few birds and has kept adding to his flock until he has made it what it is.

Harry Goodwin is doing a good poultry business. He has several hundred Rhode Island Reds and last spring hatched out about 1000 chicks.

W. O. Perry at Norway Lake has a large lot of Plymouth Rocks.

Thaddeus Roberts does an extensive poultry business, and raises several thousand chickens each spring. He markets a large quantity of eggs and poultry. The Rhode Island Red is the strain Mr. Roberts raises principally.

Mrs. Frank Morrill keeps a large lot of Rhode Island Reds and sells large lots of eggs. There both are the Red Coxs and the Single Comb and are large, richly colored birds.

Randall O. Porter has about 60 Barred Plymouth Rocks which are fine layers. Mr. Porter keeps these principally for show birds and are a handsome flock. He has exhibited these at the poultry shows and at the fair, and has won a number of ribbons at each exhibition.

Will Rogers raises a large number of R. I. Reds and Plymouth Rocks and markets a large lot of live poultry and eggs.

Harry Lovejoy is keeping Laced Wyandottes and Bantams and received several ribbons at the recent poultry show.

The Browning Club's Banquet. The 7th letter night of the Browning Reading club for this season was Monday evening.

The club met at the home of Mrs. Georgia Andrews at 7 p. m., where a banquet and unique entertainment had been prepared. The fact that it happened to be the birthday of the president, Mrs. Margaret Libby, added to the enjoyment of the evening. The dining-room and table were decorated with the club colors, lavender and white, and an immense birthday cake, beautifully decorated with vanilla and light tapers occupied the center of the table in front of the president; and that it wasn't simply a "thing of beauty" was proven later to all present.

During the supper the bean contest caused a great deal of merriment; and at the close Mrs. Lizzie Bicknell with a few well chosen remarks presented Mrs. Libby with a beautiful bouquet of assorted plums, as a gift from the club.

After the supper the members of the club retired to the parlor where the evening was spent, with a magazine guessing contest, an author contest and the writing of Browning telegrams.

At ten p. m. the president in a most impressive manner offered prayers, having thanked the committee for their efforts to make the evening a success, adjourned the meeting. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Georgia Andrews, Mrs. Grace Cushman and Mrs. Edith Bartlett.

Mrs. George Brooks is spending a week with her mother, Mrs. William H. Warren at Cornish.

L. M. Longley is having his open kitchen sheathed and Leon Kimball is doing the work.

Bernice Knapp is suffering with an abscess, and has been confined to the house for several days.

Mrs. Mary J. Bennett has had her summer kitchen sheathed up with hard pine. Albert Fogg did the work.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Longley spent the day Sunday, with Mr. Longley's cousin, Percy Sumner of Haverhill, where they were with a dance with music by Stearns' orchestra. All had a fine time.

One day last week Deputy Sheriff Frank L. Knapp of Lewiston received from O. H. Adams of Norway a souvenir emblem of his office in the shape of a beautiful hard wood key about a foot long. The key is finely finished and has "F. L. K.—1911" burnt onto the handle. Mr. Adams is a contractor and builder, also owning and operating the lumber mill at Norway. He is an uncle of Mrs. Frank Knapp.

The High school sociable was held Friday evening at New Hall.

Albert Thompson of Portland is boarding at Charles Edwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Gray are to spend two weeks in Washington, D. C.

JANUARY 20, 1911, NORWAY, MAINE.

Calico Ball.

The eighth annual Calico ball given under the auspices of the Veranda club was held at the Opera House, Tuesday evening.

There was a good crowd out and an exceptionally pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Excellent music was furnished by Stearns' orchestra and a fine supper was served.

The grand march was led by J. P. Cullinan and wife, and about 55 couples joined in the march.

At intermission ice cream was served by the Veranda club.

John P. Cullinan was floor manager, and the Aids were Alton Curtis and Wallace Sheen, with Ned Lovejoy and Laurence Hall as honorary aids.

A pleasant evening was enjoyed Wednesday at the home of Mrs. George L. Curtis, when the Quiet club, which a few years since was one of Norway's best, met.

Those who entered were Mrs. G. L. Curtis, Mrs. Lilla Locke, Mrs. Mary Winslow and Mrs. Grace Cushman. The evening was spent at whist and was thoroughly enjoyed. Refreshments of home-made candies, salted peanuts, olives, sandwiches, pickles, oranges and punch were served.

Those in the party were Jennie Baker, Mrs. Alice Ridlon, Mrs. Lizzie Sampson, Mrs. Jay Whitman, Mrs. Manie True, Mrs. Geneva Cook, Mrs. Inez Hills, Mrs. Sadie Bicknell, Mrs. Hattie Harmon, Mrs. Edie Akers, Mrs. Mary Cole, Daisy Loring of Portland, Mrs. Etta Norworthy, Elsie Farver, Abbie Curtis and Mrs. Maude DeCoster.

Allice Feltwade is doing housework for Henry Davis.

Lee M. Smith, clerk at H. B. Foster's, is spending a few days in Boston.

George Howe will leave soon for a trip to New York and Washington.

Harry Goodwin, who has been at the hospital at Lewiston, has returned home.

Horace Kimball of North Bridgton is visiting his son, Harry Kimball, and family.

Harry Downing of Bath spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Downing.

E. E. Andrews was confined to the house several days the first of the week with severe cold.

D. L. Joslyn preached at Winthrop, Sunday, for Rev. H. A. Clifford, who was away on a vacation.

Lizzie Johnson, who fell on the ice near the shoe factory some time ago and broke her wrist, has had the splints removed from her arm.

The Universalist Circle supper at Concert hall, Tuesday evening, Jan. 19, after the supper there will be a musical and literary entertainment.

Lloyd Fletcher went to the C. M. G. hospital at Lewiston, Thursday, accompanied by his mother, where he will have an operation performed for adenoids.

At the annual meeting of the Maine Association of Opticians held last week in Portland, W. W. Ellis was again elected chairman of the executive committee.

The Browning Reading club will meet Monday night with Mrs. H. L. Bartlett. Each member should carry their Shakespeare and the reading will be from the Tempest.

It is understood in military circles that Moses P. Stiles, the veteran rifleman and Captain of the Second Company of the First Regiment, is soon to tender his resignation from the captaincy and this is said to be true. Business duties. Captain Stiles has made a popular and efficient officer.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Pike entertained at their home Saturday evening. Jason Rowe and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Curtis and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Anderson, being present. The fact that it happened to be the birthday of the president, Mrs. Margaret Libby, added to the enjoyment of the evening. The dining-room and table were decorated with the club colors, lavender and white, and an immense birthday cake, beautifully decorated with vanilla and light tapers occupied the center of the table in front of the president; and that it wasn't simply a "thing of beauty" was proven later to all present.

Vital Statistics of Paris.

During the year 1910, 40 marriages were recorded; 35 of which were in this town and five elsewhere, one of each of the parties being a resident.

The number of births recorded was 21; the number of deaths were 61, and 29 others are recorded which occurred elsewhere. All the persons were either residents of the town or were brought here for burial.

John Stevens, who died April 7, at the age of 82 years and 2 months, and George Berry who died, July 21, at the age of 92 years and 1 month, were the two oldest persons.

Mrs. Sarah Bumpus.

Mrs. Sarah Bumpus died at her home, Wednesday, at the age of 73 years. She was a daughter of Daniel Swan of Hebron. For several years past she has been confined to her bed and was nearly helpless.

She is survived by four children, Warren E. of Buckfield, Mrs. F. M. Penley and Mrs. J. A. Sturtevant of Paris and Howard G. with whom she has resided, also a brother and two sisters.

The funeral was held at the Baptist church, Hebron, Friday and was attended by Rev. W. H. T. Beck, pastor of church by which Mrs. Bumpus was a member.

Mothers' Meeting.
The Mothers' meeting at the Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon, was well attended and an interesting program given. The meeting opened with a roll call, followed by a reading of quotations. Mrs. A. T. McWhorter gave a talk describing three different homes that she has worked in during her mission work and spoke freely expressing her ideas on "Training Children."

Mrs. George Mortimer read a paper on "Training the Father," and opened the discussion on "What a Part Soulding Should Have in the Training of a Child," and was freely discussed as well as the other questions: "To What Extent Should a Parent Sacrifice for a Child?" and "How Much Ought We to Trust Our Children?"

Mrs. Rizzpah Whitman read a very interesting article on "Money and the Child" after which different questions were discussed.

The Mothers' meeting will be held at the Congregational church with Mrs. Emily West and Mrs. H. C. Morton as leaders.

William Culbert went to the Central Maine General Hospital at Lewiston, Friday, where he was operated on immediately for appendicitis, which was the case. He is reported as getting along well.

Amy Hayden of Haverhill, Mass., who has been spending several weeks with friends and relatives here, returned to her home in Haverhill, Saturday.

Mrs. Clarence G. Morton and children of West Paris, who will spend several weeks at Haverhill.

The officers elected at the Baptist Sunday school for the year 1911 are as follows:

Supt.—H. W. Denison.
Asst. Supt.—C. A. Marston.
Supt. of Primary Dept.—Mrs. L. A. West.
Supt. of Sunday School—Mrs. F. A. Fairfield.
Supt. of Home Dept.—Annie Edwards.
Librarian—J. E. Murch.
Ass't. Lib.—Ruth Kneeland.

The tables were filled at the Congregational vestry, Thursday evening, when one of the special events of the year took place, the men's supper, to which all did ample justice. The program consisted of musical selections and readings by Arthur D. Welch of Portland, which afforded a most pleasant amount of pleasure to the audience.

At the home of Mrs. Frank Plummer on Pleasant street, Thursday evening, Class '05,' Paris High school, gave a pleasant party, a linen shower, a 6:30 a fine supper.

After the supper the party adjourned to the parlor when the hunt began. Miss Barrows was the recipient of many useful and ornamental gifts and at a late hour the party returned to their homes after a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Mrs. Eastman and Grace Thayer entertained the Seneca club, Monday evening. The study for the evening was the Philippines. The program consisted of a reading by Frances Hodgson Burnett by each member of the club, a sketch of Mrs. Burnett by Maude Douglass; paper, "The Number of Islands," their Geology, Climate, etc., Mrs. Stewart, the Philippine Types and Native Customs, by Mrs. L. A. West.

I suffered a great deal from severe pains in the small of my back and a soreness across my kidneys. As the kidneys secretions were unnatural, I decided that my kidneys needed a tonic and procured a supply of Doan's Kidney

The Ladies' Aid.

We've put a fine addition on the good old It's just the latest kitter, with a gallery and It seats a thousand people, finest church in all the town.

And when it's done, why we planned ten thousand down.

That is, we paid five thousand, every deacon
did the best.

And the Ladies' Aid Society it promised all the rest.

We've got an organ in the church, very finest in the land.

It's got a thousand pipes or more, its melody is grand.

And when we sit in cushioned pews and hear the master play
it carries us to realms of bliss unnumbered miles away.

It cost a cool three thousand, and it's stood the hardest test.

We'll pay a thousand on it, The Ladies' Aid,
the rest.

They'll give a hundred societies, cantatas, too.
They'll bake a thousand angel cakes, and tons of cream they'll freeze.

They'll bring a cake and angel and sweat for seven years or more.

And then they'll start all over again for a carpet on the floor.

No, it isn't just like digging out the money
when the Ladies' Aid gets busy and says,
"We'll pay the rest."

Of course, more proud of our big church from pulpit to the spire.

It is the darling of our eyes, the cream of our deeds.

But when I see the sisters work to raise the cash that looks
I somehow feel the church is built on women's tired backs.

And so, of that kind, it is said, stimulus reach the regions blest,
That men get the toll and sweat and The Ladies' Aid, the rest.

Bad Teeth and Insanity.
The relation between bad teeth, insanity and crime has been the subject of much discussion recently in dental surgeons' circles. Investigation has shown that thirty to sixty per cent. of the patients in insane asylums have been found to have impacted third molar teeth, which are prevented from coming in owing to either one or two causes.

Either the bone may be so thick over the place where the tooth should come in that it cannot force its way through or the direction that the teeth take in trying to come in may be such that the tooth becomes wedged against the one in front, and this will prevent its eruption.

A tooth of that kind, it is said, stimu-lates an intense nerve irritation, and may truly "set a man crazy." A patient in Cleveland, O., was cured of epilepsy by the extraction of a tooth of this kind.

A writer on the subject has been foolish enough to give him a few words, but you bet I wouldn't supply him with any information at all.

Why if he could just down all of our language, the next thing we'd know would be that a bunch of school boys would land here with books printed in monkey talk, and they'd teach us to read and write and spell; and then after they would come book agents to sell us dictionaries and encyclopedias in our own speech—just as if we couldn't read the capitals of industry to put up factories and build railroads and give us employment, so that we could work and earn money to buy the books.

I tell you, friend, that at time we wouldn't be any better off than humans." [Life.

Maxims by Mark Twain.
We ought never to do wrong when people are looking.
Let us be thankful for the fools. But for them the rest of us could not succeed.

Nothing is so ignorant as a man's left hand, except a lady's watch.
Few things are harder to put up with than the annoyance of a good example.

Get out of one's care of itself, but to get the full value of a joy you must have somebody to divide it with.
Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education.

Wrinkles should merely indicate where smiles have been.
There are several good protections against temptations, but the surest is cowardice.

Habit is a habit, and not to be flung out of the window by any man, but coaxed downstairs a step at a time.
Man is the only animal that blushes or needs to.

How The Lawyer Got Even.
A young Philadelphia lawyer, employed by a woman defendant in a recent divorce suit, was examining the libellant when the case was brought to trial.

"You say you want to divorce your wife because she drinks?" he asked.
The husband grumbled about a surly assent.

First Aid to Bashful Girls.

I want to talk with the bashful girls
this morning.

Why are you bashful? What are you afraid of?

Are you less pretty than those around you?

Are you less well educated than they?
Are you deformed physically? Are you defective mentally?

Are you abnormal in any way?
Then why are you afraid of your fellow beings? Why do you shrink when pushed into the limelight, and tremble when attention is drawn to you?

The Creator did not intend that any of his children should suffer from self-depreciation; he put a goodly lot of detectors among us, and has seen to it that every human being was surrounded with his or her own little coterie of necessity, but very disagreeable "knock-ers."

Surely with this ample provision for taking the conceit out of us, it is unnecessary for us to add to our burden of self-conceit by blushing at inpropriety and inconvenient times, by shivering whenever spoken to by strangers or origing into helplessness when asked to raise our voices in behalf of ourselves or others.

Don't be bashful. Speak up for yourselves, girls mine. The world will not do you talking for you; it is up to you to make your own little trumpet heard.

Of course it is "blowing your own horn" but let them tell the world you exist; you are one who would do it for you?

Yes, I know sometimes, but mark me, when people get into line and too for you, it is because you have already begun the tooting yourself.

We hear a lot about the modest violets and they surely are lovely in their own little nooks, but the roses are flaunted in the store windows, and the lilies, and the orchids and the numerous other flowers are in the store when it was when it comes to dealing in horticulture.

You see people in this busy age like to have their flowers and their friends—step out into the open and assert their presence. They admit that lovely violets are in the shadows but they have not the time to go hunting for them.

Also this is such a skeptical age—they wonder a little if the violet has not some cause for blushing, and they take the case at its own brilliant valuation and leave the violet to its modesty—and its own obscurity.

So away with bashfulness—sometimes called modesty—and hold out your hand for the little plums of recognition, which are on life's table for everybody.

If opportunities refuse to come to you,
to discipline yourself go and hunt for them.

Join a club at once and ask the president to let you read papers until you get over it. The club may suffer, but you are entitled to this chance to educate yourself in self-esteem.

And embrace every chance you hear of to let your voice be heard. It is your right.

Modesty (or bashfulness) fine; self-respect, better; self-reliance, best.
It is yours. Take it.

The Brown Tails.

Letter to the Bridgton News that we published—When the brown tails made their first appearance here, you took the ground that we had sufficient warning from Massachusetts and New Hampshire and that neglect meant the extermination of our apple industry. You also insisted that a bounty be offered, giving every person so disposed an opportunity to earn what he could in collecting the nests.

The wisdom of your position was shown in the fact that the town was cleaned thoroughly. But the southwest winds brought in a new supply, and since that time it has been the policy of the town to engage men by the day to do the work, and each year circulars have been sent to property owners notifying them to clean their trees or the work would be performed by the town and the expense added to the tax bill.

A very little consideration will show that it is a simple impossibility for the selectmen to know whether the taxpayer has cleaned his trees or not. They cannot make a personal inspection, and those who have no intention of obeying the law understand thoroughly that it will not be enforced, and the caterpillars thrive in their trees, and spread in countless thousands to trees which have been faithfully cleaned.

The territory covered by men employed by the town is only a narrow strip on the highway. They cannot disturb nests away from that locality and if the owners allow them to remain all money expended in cleaning the trees on the highway is practically wasted, as there are so many undisturbed.

The year you gave the matter your personal attention there were about two thousand nests paid for by the town, but the number has been steadily increasing, and today there are without exaggeration tens of thousands ready for work in the spring. One can hardly look at apple trees without finding from three to a dozen nests, and the simple, plain unvarnished fact is unless a radical change is made at once our apple business is done. There are nests enough in sight to strip every apple tree in town.

We know that under the present policy of the town the nests have steadily increased. We know that our apples bring many thousands of dollars to our families, no one of whom is ready to relinquish his annual receipts. Let us then give the bounty system another trial.
Let the sharp-eyed boy have an opportunity to earn something. He will find the nests if they are in existence. Where the bounty system has been tried in other places the appropriation has been quickly exhausted.

We ask you to take the matter up in your paper again, as it is certainly the most important question before the town today.

It Grows Hair.
Here are Facts We Want You to Prove at Our Risk.

Marvelous as it may seem, Rexall
"93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course, in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which inferiorly responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet necessity, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum or permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall
"93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed.
If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give you satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without any question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store,
The Rexall Store, F. P. Stone, Main street, Norway.

The Toll-Keeper.

A Tale of the War.

The old toll-gate house still stands sentinel by the roadside as it has stood for a hundred years but no longer is seen the jovial toll-master bustling forth to the squaky gate for passing travelers as they passed on their way over the hill. Even the gate now has disappeared but the spring bubbles over the trough and down the hill with the same merriment as ever. I had passed this road during the war when with the regiment, and well remembered the face of the old toll-keeper, although I was then not much more than a boy.

A few years after the war I again went to Virginia, partly on my own account and partly for a friend who owed estates there. Ravages of the war were to be seen on every hand for 'twas here armies had camped, both Northern and Southern, and this same road had rested such a clutter of hundreds of cavalry-men and tramping foot-soldiers going forth on their terrible errand of "victory or death."

It was just at night when I came up to the old toll-gate house and a heavy shower was fast coming on.

The cheery-faced keeper came to the door at my knock and said, "Welcome, stranger, my house is small but will hold us two."

"Thank you, I would be more than pleased," said I, as we went into the little kitchen where his supper was already laid on the table.

After the meal was done full justice to the dishes was done and we adjourned to the little porch attached to the kitchen, for a smoke. By this time the storm had about cleared away and it was a beautiful Southern night.

The full moon came out from behind a dark cloud with such a radiance that one could see the road wreathe away over the hill in the distance, and all the dripping leaves and grass shone like silver.

"This is just such a night as one during the war which I will not forget soon," said the toll-master.

"Tell me the story," I said, "before we go in for the night."

"I have never mentioned it before," said he, "but it can do no harm now, for the tale is safe here, I hope, by this time up in his native state."

"Many lads did not live to see the old home again," said I, after a pause.

"True, too true. Full many brave boys from this side of the river went forth at morn, that now are lying somewhere under the stars," remarked the old toll-master, as his gaze swept over the line of hills visible in the soft moonlight. And then he went on without interruption to tell me of the boy who returned safely home to his native state in the far North.

"As I was saying, it was just such a night as tonight,—heavy showers, then clearing away, long in the evening, with the full moon bursting out above dark clouds in the East."

"It was a few days after the terrible battle of the Wilderness,—that glorious savage butchery which brought neither side victory, but was like the fierce struggle of some primitive, warlike race, without either plan or purpose except the wild purpose of exterminating the enemy."

"Part of the Federal army had passed the house on the morning, and I was just wondering where they were camped that night, as I looked out over the winding road, the same as we see it tonight, when all at once the lone figure of a man appeared coming slowly down the road."

"He did not seem to me till I looked out in that particular way. A quiet smile flickered across the old toll-master's face as he paused for a moment, his eyes searching the road up and down."

"Did the horseman pass?" said I, at length anxiously.

"Yes," said he, "but not till he looked into all my windows and took a turn out around the house, did he start off down the way out of sight."

"What became of the boy?" said I, again anxious for him to continue.

"When the coast was clear, I gave a low whistle and he came out from his hiding place. They seem to miss you still to him in the yankee regiment."

"Yes," said he, "he said he would go back again. I ran away from home and enlisted, lying about my age and have had enough of this war and only want to get back to the old home once more where my father and mother are waiting for me."

"Do not fear that I will give you away," said I, "my boy, you shall stay and rest with me as long as you will. What if they should come and search for me? I'll be in a starved manner. Never fear my lad I am your friend from now on."

"Then we went in and I gave him some good warm supper and sent him to bed for he was well-nigh worn out, poor lad, with marches and camping on the wet ground."

"It must have been about ten o'clock and the moon was shining its best, when I was getting ready to go to bed, I heard voices coming from the road below."

"Stepping to the door I heard a voice saying, 'He must have passed this house not long ago, perhaps he is still hanging around hereabouts. We had better search this time.'"

"I was in a startled manner. I went in and desperately shook that lad as he was never shook before on since, I warrant. 'Wake up! come with me,' I whispered, little knowing what to do with him till chance led me to start for the cellar."

There was a bin of potatoes in the corner and I ordered the boy to lie down in that, then covered him over with the potatoes till the bin looked just about the same as it did before."

"I have just finished and got up stairs when the soldiers had finished their search outside and came thundering on my door. I fumbled around in a very sleepy manner and finally opened it to see who was around at that time of night. They said they were looking for some deserters and were going to search my house thoroughly. 'They are not here,' said I, 'but you can come in if you wish.' So they stalked in, six of them with their guns thumping on the floor or their swords clanking at their sides."

"They looked all around my three rooms below, turning the beds topsy-turvy, even looking in the brick oven. Then they went up stairs and thumped loudly around while I waited below. But they found nothing suspicious so they came down shortly and were just leaving when they thought of looking in the cellar."

"Taking the light they filed down the narrow stairs into the cellar. 'How that lad's heart must have jumped with ribs about that time,' said I. Yes, but not as hard as when the soldiers, after not finding him anywhere, thought they would help themselves to some of my potatoes in the bin and began picking them out at a lively rate. 'It was lucky you covered him up good and deep,' said I."

"Well, they gave up their search and came up and went off down the road out of sight."

"Did the boy get away all right?" I asked.

"He left here safe and sound the next morning early with a good luncheon and a little money which I made him take. He promised to let me know when he reached home, but I have not heard yet from him," said the old toll-master as he finished his tale.

"Do you still look for him?" I said after a pause.

"I would give ten dollars to see him again and to know he got home all safe," the old man exclaimed.

"Then pass over your ten," I said rising or here stands the toll-master, and sound. And I have come back all the way to see the old man who saved the lad's life that dreadful night. 'I have come at last to thank you and try to repay the great debt I owe you.'"

Fishing With Cormorants.
On the banks of the river Ya we saw many Chinese cormorant fishers with their birds, which are very tame and intelligent. When fishing a piece of grass is first tied round their throats to prevent them from swallowing the fish, and they are afterward turned into the water. The small fish they can easily manage to bring back to the boat, but when they find a large specimen it sometimes needs the co-operation of two or three of the birds to land it safely on their master's boat. In this river the fishermen often catch the great salamander, a huge newt or water lizard, which sometimes reaches a length of ten to twelve feet and whose flesh is much appreciated by the Chinese.—Wide World Magazine.

Too Great a Shock.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SUCCESS seems to justify the means. Still, you occasionally meet a man who feels like keeping the means out of sight.

Blessed are the uses of adversity, and we piously hope that our enemies only may enjoy them.

It takes herculean efforts to raise a man, but most any old chump can pull him down.

We can run away from our plain duty, but have an extremely ugly way of hunting us up and driving us into a corner.

Attending to others' business is certainly worth a salary. Either see that you get it or let them run the job themselves.

Sometimes the difference between a man and a dog is largely in favor of the latter.

Some men seem to be entirely immune from any amount of sense or reason that you may attempt to infect them with.

Poverty is said to be a barren thing, but it breeds discomfort and disease very rapidly.

The Problem.

Mother thinks she'll make a doctor out of Jim.

Father thinks he'd better fill a judge's chair.

Uncle John would mold a preacher out of him.

Really choosing a profession is a care.

Cousin May would like to see him grace the state.

Uncle George is sure a soldier's trade would fit.

Charley says that millionaires are all the rage.

For a fine profession that is surely it.

Mother says that able doctors heal the sick.

And are useful to the world in many ways.

Father says the legal trade is still his pick.

For the lawyers have such fine and winning ways.

Uncle John is sure his choice would be the best.

Cousin May is just as certain as the rest, Charley's pick appears to him the only one.

Oh, it's surely lots of trouble picking out a profession.

Each relation is a self appointed scout.

With a diagram his future life to plan.

You may wonder when they all are taking hold.

Why they do not give the lad himself a show.

There's a reason—he is only six weeks old.

How is one of tender years like that to know?

While He Waited.

"Are you the girl that took my order?" asked the old grocer as the pretty waitress tripped in under the weight of her load.

"I sure am," replied the girl, who wasn't addicted to slang, but could use it on occasions.

"I want to compliment you on one thing."

"What's that you're giving me now?"

"It is this: You don't look a day older than when you took it."

Cautious.

"You never kissed a girl in your life?"

"Never."

"You don't know what you are missing."

"Yes, I do."

"Microbes."

Easy.

"He has resisted every temptation so far."

"My! He must be strong."

"Not necessarily."

"Why not?"

"His special brand hasn't happened along."

His Way.

"Women are terribly hard to understand."

"Oh, I don't know."

"How is that?"

"I never try, and then they come in flocks and explain the whole thing."

Florida.

"Has he good taste?"

"No."

"That's too bad."

"Yes, but that isn't the worst."

"What could be worse?"

"He has so much of it."

Trials of a Father.

"I thought you were going to retire at fifty."

"I did expect to, but not yet."

"But you have made money."

"Yes, and I have two more sons-in-law to support."

Not Exactly.

"Have you seen his new magazine?"

"Yes."

"He said it was to be different. How is it?"

"Indifferent."

Bad Example.

Small boats, they say, should hug the shore.

Nor venture out like freighters.

But those who go about in them should not be imitators.

A Different Family.

Some ladies were visiting the Boston Art museum when one of them showed a lively interest in some large plants which had been placed there for decorative purposes. She turned to one of the elderly retainers and asked eagerly, "These plants belong to the banana family, do they not?" With scorn and injured pride the veteran attendant answered coldly, "No, they belong to General Logan."

Her Dearest Pets.

"I have a heartrending scene in my new drama."

"How now?"

"The heroine is in such reduced circumstances that she has to cook the canary."

"Sad-sad!"

"But the worst is yet to come. She has to build the fire with the rubber plant."—Washington Herald.

Pension.

At last, the National House of Representatives has passed a pension bill, by vote of 212 to 52. A Washington correspondent says the eastern members as a rule, voted against it, while the western members voted for it, and earnestly advocated it.

Speaker Cannon, advocated the passage of the bill, in an able speech and Representative Calderhead of Kansas, urged the passage of the bill as a matter of honor for the Nation, the men who offered their lives to save the nation.

Representative Fuller of Illinois, called up the bill, in an eloquent speech, in which he represented it as debt due to the veterans from the country, and fitted to carry wide spread benefit to worthy, suffering soldiers.

It is said by some that the bill will be held up in the Senate, and not allowed to pass. Others say that the Senate will pass the bill through fear that if it is killed by the Senate, the next Congress will be Democratic will pass this or similar bill and thus the Republicans will lose the credit of it.

If true this is a poor policy for state to adopt, but it is a notable fact that the Republican Party has played politics with the old soldier for several years, to the disgrace of our nation and the disgust of worthy men in that party, and this has been one of the causes the Republicans have helped to throw down the Republic.

At the last session, the Republicans, as shown by the Congressional Record, would not allow a pension bill to come up for a vote, because they said there was a depleted treasury, but at the same time they appropriated over $100,000,000 for purposes which were not absolutely necessary, and they admitted that the pension bill advocated would require, as a large estimate, only $45,000,000, and this was an over estimate, as Hon. Cyrus S. Suloway shows in his recent statement that on a correct estimate there would not be required more than 27,000,000

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Bear Mountain Grange.
Bear Mountain Grange had a smaller attendance than usual on Saturday evening but the exercises were quite interesting and instructive. The chair of Potomac was filled by the installation of that of Sister Edith McIntire by Pastor Master W. K. Hamilton.

A discussion of the subject, "The preparation and use of firewood," was opened by Brother L. Saunders, who gave an interesting address on his experience and practice of the preparation of fuel, especially in preparing gray birch for the fire, which should be stacked in the woodhouse soon after it is felled in the range, before it can be injured by exposure to the weather.

Sister Miller spoke earnestly on the point of having a plenty of dry wood for cooking and heating, and protested vigorously against subjecting the housewife to the trouble and vexation of burning green wood and that badly fitted for the stove.

The subject of the comparative expense of stoves and open fireplaces was dwelt upon at some length. Bro. W. K. Hamilton said the difference in the cost of supplying the fireplace is much in favor of the open fire for the great benefit to health on account of the excellent ventilation furnished by the chimney.

Bros. Will Haynes, A. L. Sanderson and Sister Clara Hamilton spoke in agreement with the remarks of the other speakers. The next meeting is appointed at 2 o'clock p. m. in two weeks.

Cow Testing Association.
The Waterford and Norway Cow Testing Association held its annual meeting on Jan. 10, at Grange hall. Dinner was served at noon by resident ladies. Various matters of business were attended to. The report of the treasurer showed the finances of the association to be in good condition. Forty-one members paid annual fees of 25 cents. Voted that the Commissioner of Agriculture be requested to appoint W. G. Hutton, Dairy Instructor.

Voted to continue agricultural work at Augusta as in former years. Officers selected for the present year:

President—V. E. Dunn.
First Vice—W. Abbott.
Sec.—C. S. Hamlin.
Treas.—George Dunn.
Auditor—Adrian Elliott.
Ex Comm.—L. E. McIntire.

A vote was passed thanking the retiring president, L. E. McIntire, and W. K. Hamilton, secretary, for their faithful services to the association during the two years past.

The next monthly meeting was appointed to be held at Norway on the second Wednesday of February.

Monday and Tuesday mornings saw the mercury at 12 degrees below zero in some parts of the village.

Freeman Hapgood is handling a large quantity of hard wood timber to Hapgood & Willard's mill for manufacture into barrel staves for Leon Willard.

Ruth K. Kimball of Lovell, is attending the Castine Normal School. She says they have a very nice school and pleasant location.

In the Honorable Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, next to be held at Paris, Oxtford and said County, on the second Tuesday of March, A. D. 1911.

Ellis A. Standish, in said County, wife of Charles E. Standish, respectfully represents that her maiden name was Ella A. Loveloy; that she was lawfully married to the said Charles E. Standish on the 10th of October, 1906, by R. A. Swasey, Justice of the Peace, at the residence of her husband and she was West of the County of Oxford, Maine, and that she has since that time been cohabiting with the said Charles E. Standish, and that she has always cohabited herself toward her husband as a wife, and that she has been guilty of adultery and cohabitation with the said Charles E. Standish, and that the said Charles E. Standish is unknown to her, and that she has no collusion with the said Charles E. Standish to obtain a divorce.

Wherefore she prays that a divorce may be decreed between her and the said Charles E. Standish for the cause above set forth, and that she may have the custody of her minor child, aged two years, and named Harry C. Standish.

ELLA A. STANDISH.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of January, A. D. 1911.

Before me, MATTHEW MCCARTHY, Justice of the Peace.

Rheumatism

Is A Constitutional Disease.

It manifests itself in local aches and pains,—inflamed joints and stiff muscles,—but it cannot be cured by local applications.

It requires constitutional treatment, and the best is a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine.

BOLSTEE'S MILLS.

Lella Mills, who has been ill, is now gaining.

Mrs. J. D. Howe and Mary Hicks recently visited friends in Otisfield.

Miss Pingree of Bethel has been a guest of Mrs. A. R. Clark for a few days.

Mrs. Arthur Edwards and babe, who have been making an extended visit at Cook's Mills, have returned home.

John Hancock is peddling meat. He goes to Oxford and Casco. All hope he will continue in the business as it is very convenient to have a local market.

The latest meeting of the W. G. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. A. U. Weston, when a few friends were invited to join in the meeting.

The many friends of Mrs. Virginia Weston Hagar were pained to learn of the sudden demise of her husband, Isaac Hagar, at their home in Milan, N. H., on the 10th inst. Relatives and friends from this place attended the funeral on Thursday last.

Mrs. A. W. Weston has a lobster catch which bears a profusion of bright red blossoms too numerous to count. Mrs. Mary Hicks also has a wonderful bogon with immense leaves, which completely covers the stand upon which it rests, making "a thing of beauty" this severe winter weather.

Mrs. Elizabeth J. Earle of Canaan, who was a former resident of Otisfield and Norway, passed her eightieth milestone on the 20th ult. She received over 100 post cards, also letters of congratulation, hot-house flowers, birthday cakes and many other valuable tokens of affection from many friends residing in Maine towns, Weeks' Mills, Windsor, Vassboro, South China, Augusta, Kent's Hill and Otisfield.

Your correspondent has received notice of the approaching wedding of Elizabeth Hutchins, who has resided for some years at the home of J. W. Weston in Harrison, and Robert McAfee of Montreal, Canada. The young couple will reside in Bowdoin, where Mr. McAfee has purchased a farm. The many friends of Miss Hutchins in this vicinity greatly regret to lose her as she is especially fitted to adorn society with her musical and literary talents, and all wish her much joy in her new relation. Mr. McAfee has been a student at U. of M. and is well qualified for his chosen labors.

SOUTH ALBANY.

Merritt Sawin continues to improve in health.

Mrs. Henry Sawin is having a bad attack of her throat trouble.

Hazel Sawin is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hiram Holt at Waterford.

Mrs. J. F. Lord is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Penfold at Portland.

Mrs. Ernest Browne has sold her gray horse, Sylvie, to Chatham parties.

Eugene Lovejoy of North Waterford is at work for George Abbott cutting timber for box boards.

Ernest Browne and Roy Lord are cutting timber for E. C. Henley. Walter Lord and Mr. Henley are hauling it to Harry Browne's mill at North Waterford.

Fred Mosher of North Waterford is at Merritt Sawin's, Saturday and helped clean out one of the chimneys in the main part of the house, which was out of working order. The trouble was located two feet above the fire in the second story and a brick was discovered lodged inside in such a manner that the soot had oiled around it until the space inside the chimney was entirely filled. The brick must have been accidentally dropped during the building of the chimney as none are missing from the chimney and in no other way could it have found its way into the chimney.

EAST DENMARK.

Mrs. Lydia Evans and son Harbert called at Alphonso Hilton's, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Agnes Huckle and little daughter have returned home after spending several weeks in Dorchester, Mass.

A Boy's Vision of the Town.

The boy who has to milk cows, clean out the stables, chop the wood, stormy weather, and especially if he does not have the right kind of a home, is very apt to have visions of the town which are the veriest "pipe dreams." He thinks of the town as a place where there are no cows to milk, no stables to clean out, no pigs to slop; a place where his work is done at five or six, and does not begin until eight, or perhaps nine o'clock in the morning. He thinks of it as a place where there is life and motion, boys and girls gallop, dances in the evening, and electric lights; a place where there is money to be made easily, and plenty of it; a place where he can do as he pleases after working hours, can see life and broaden his vision. In short he thinks that life would be worth living in the town and that it is hardly worth living in the country. This is what the boy sees, or thinks he sees in town life. Here a vision of his life has spent a few years in the city.

The town boy has his visions of the country, that are quite as rosy as the country boy's visions of the town. He thinks of green fields, and the song of birds, of fine feeding, and of a swimming hole, and of hunting and fishing. To the city boy, raised in a poor house, with poor accommodations, and poorly ventilated, with the father toiling day after day to provide the necessities of life, it seems that if he were in the farmer's sun life would be one glad song. He, like the country boy, will be wiser when he gets to know the facts.

The country boy, when he goes to town and looks for a job, met with a curt refusal by almost every one to whom he applies. They all want to know what he can do. If he gets a position in a store, he must work for small wages, barely enough to furnish him with food.

He is not often invited to the homes of people in the city, can not visit with his neighbors and with well-to-do people, as he did in the country. He will probably have to sweep and do the dirtiest work. It must be there on time, and the first one in the morning. There is no time to sit on the fence and gossip with a neighbor while the horses are resting, or to stop and chat with another boy while he meets on the highway.

When must work, work, work, work. When night comes, he cannot sit down by the fire and crack jokes with mother and sisters. Town doors do not swing open as easily nor as noiseless hinges as those of the country.

Possibly he gets a position in a bank or an office. He is told there is always room at the top; but finds that the top is hard to reach. The saloon door is open and offers companionship. "So he goes on working hard, and his health spends his money, gets nothing ahead, finds promotion slow, and often impossible.

The town boy, when he gets out in the country, finds that it is not all the song birds and blooming of flowers and golden sunshine and fishing and hunting. He thought that anybody could farm, and finds that he is mistaken, that efficient farm labor is skilled labor, and that the farm department of life comes slowly and with years.

The town boy who goes to the farm, however, has this advantage. Every kind of farm labor, to be efficient, requires the exercising of the mind; the boy must think, and he must think. He finds that it is possible, if he goes at it in the right way, to take the drudgery out of farm life. He finds that there is a variety in it not to be in any occupation in the city, or at least in very few. He finds that it is possible to make considerable advancement, to make a considerable advancement, to make a considerable advancement, to make a considerable advancement.

NORTH WATERFORD.
50th Anniversary.
About 200 people attended the exercises of the 50th anniversary of the dedication of the North Waterford church on last Thursday, the 12th, including both teachers and scholars of our district school. At twelve an excellent dinner was provided by the ladies' aid society. And especial mention must be taken here of the well behaved and orderly children of our school. The people sat at the tables about an hour, and after justice to the food and talking over affairs of bygone times.

After dinner was over our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hague, called the assembly up-stairs in the church by the top of church-bell. First was singing then a prayer by Rev. Mr. Sias of Waterford, then singing and a few remarks from Mr. Hague, then reading of letters about the dedication.
One letter worthy of notice was read by Mr. M. Hamlin from an old acquaintance and neighbor of this town but she is now living in Worcester, Mass., and that was Mrs. Ellen Millett Davenport. Letters of regret were sent us by people who once worshipped with us, and read by Dea. Hersey as Mrs. Louise Knight. They were from Rev. Mr. Kite, a former pastor, and Harry Saunders and family, Hattie Chaplin of Bridgton and Samuel Warren of Vermont.
Remarks were made by Aaron Paige of Norway and Henry Sawin and Fred Mosher, telling us about how the church was made and how put together and erected. It was interestingly told by Mr. Sawin how the church steeple was raised. Last of all I must mention what a beautiful day the Lord set apart for us for the exercises of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Llew Millett of Waterford took dinner last Saturday at Mrs. M's parental home.
Mary Hamlin of South Waterford visited her sister, Mrs. Helen Rice, last week.
Fannie Hersey returned home to North Bridgton with her friend, Miss Fogg, over night.
The Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. Fred Black on the afternoon of Jan. 10 and the following officers chosen for the ensuing year:
Pres.—Mrs. Bertha H. Saunders.
V. Pres.—Mrs. Fred Black.
Sec.—Mrs. Helen B. Knight.
Treas.—Mrs. Louise Knight.
Coun.—Mrs. Charlotte Butters.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent and the hosts furnished us with a treat of two kinds of home made candies and corn balls. We left about six o'clock for our respective homes.
NORTH PARIS.
Mrs. Olive Kimball is on the sick list.
George Stone filled Mrs. J. B. Crawford's ice house, last week.
Mrs. B. F. Elwell is receiving a visit from her father, Mr. Paine.
M. D. Foss is on the sick list. Carl Peterson is doing his chores.
C. A. Churchill and family visited at Carl Churchill's in Buckfield, Jan. 12.
Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hollis, Sumner Hill, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McAllister, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Trask, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Bubbler and Alice Murch attended the L. O. O. F. public installation at West Paris, Saturday night.

A. B. Frost is still confined to the house.
Mrs. D. C. Smith and baby, are quite sick with colds.
Mrs. N. W. Frost and daughter were in town, Saturday.
Mr. and Mrs. Nell Bodwell from Andover, were in town, Sunday.
CASCO.
Thomas A. Edison, the wizard of electricity, predicts the speedy passing of the steam locomotive. To a Cosmopolitan Magazine interviewer, he said: "The steam locomotive is blowing its last blast for millions of people. The next generation of New Yorkers and New Englanders will first hear at school of steam locomotives and never will see them unless they go to some State that has no northern water power nor much population. Water wheels will make electricity to run all the railroads that traverse regions in which there is abundant water power. Whole systems like the Great Northern will be thus operated. In densely populated States electric locomotives will replace steam regardless of whatever water power is available. The New York Central will be electrified from end to end. Nor will there be in all New England or New York a railroad operated by steam power."

"Don't Know Enough to Vote."
Among the few thousand men in Washington who voted against woman's suffrage at the November election was one at Vancouver, who, after getting his ballot, asked that someone assist in preparing and voting it. One of the bystanders offered his services. He read off the names of the amendments, and told the voter what they meant. "This one means that if you vote yes, you will give a vote for woman's suffrage, allowing women to vote," explained the helper.
"Vote no; women don't know enough to vote!" he almost shouted, "vote against that for me!"
At last we have something to be really thankful for. Fashion has decreed that the "rampant rat" and the "bulging bun" must go.
Of all the monopolists the one we most detest is he who monopolizes conversation and prevents us from getting in our word.

The 13th Census gives the population of the town of Rumford, 6777; of Rumford village, 5427.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN
Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to be used for their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in any case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Pity the Horses.
Go where one will and evidence will be found that man's inhumanity to dumb beasts is not entirely a thing of the past. In fitting harnesses, improper and unequal adjustments disturb the temper, if they do not kill the shoulders and strain the tendons. Beyond these are the over-heavy loads, the ill-fitted harness, the lame and maimed animals seen everywhere. It is New Year's and a good time for strong resolutions. A writer in Breeder's Gazette lays down the following plain and sensible rules which should be followed by every horse.

Do not ask a horse to do anything unreasonable or beyond his power, and always be sure your horse understands what you require before punishing him.
Do not jerk your horse's mouth; you are using steel against flesh and blood.
Do not fight your horses.
Do not shout at your horses; they can probably hear you when they can't see you.
Do not leave your horses hitched. If you have to leave them, tie them safely, or unhitch and drop the tongue.
Do not tie to barb wire fences, wagons or other implements. Tie to a post or tree that is not less than 3 inches or 30 inches. With a young horse use a halter or backstomach.
Do not cross barb wire fences. If absolutely necessary, take all precautions, such as putting a log or blanket so that the horse can see what he is stepping over.
Treat your horses kindly; you may need them again.
Catch your horses properly. Do not rope a broken horse with a slack line. If they do not know how to be led, teach them.
Train your horse to stand still when being mounted and to be gentle.
Carriage horses should be shod and back before using the horse.
See that your harness, especially collars and bridles, fit properly, and mend all broken and weak places.
Drive your horses up to the bit and see that each horse does his share of the work. This is the driver's business. It is also his business to think for a horse; the latter has only instinct to guide him.

NORTHEAST LOVELL.
Harold Gray is gaining.
Bert Brackett is a little better, only he is still quite lame.
Mr. and Mrs. Ben Russell visited his sister, Mrs. Will Stanford, Sunday.
Wilson Emery and Edna McAllister visited at John Kendall's, Sunday.
Isabelle Andrews still has a very bad cold but she is so she attends school at Fryeburg.
Mrs. Percy Frisbes and son from Massachusetts are visiting her mother, Mrs. Will Stanford.
Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kendall and little daughter visited her folks, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McAllister, Sunday.
People in this part of the town were sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Georgia Parker of No. 4. She has been sick for a long time and has suffered very much.
Mr. and Mrs. Mel Charles of No. 3, who have been sick with the measles, are both gaining and we all will be glad when we can see them out again.

NORTH CHATHAM, N. H.
But very little snow. The snow roller has only been used once so far this winter.
Preston Chandler came home from Concord, the 13th, and will return this week.
Ira A. Andrews and wife from Lovell came through the woods and attended the Grange meeting.
Byron Johnson and Frank Walker have been in the place with their gasoline engine sawing wood.
There will be a public installation of the officers of Eagle Grange on Thursday evening, Jan. 26th. They will be installed by the State lecturer, Andrew L. Felker.
The people of this place were saddened to hear of the death of George Day of Connecticut, formerly of Siow. His aged mother of Stow and a brother of Fryeburg went to Waltham, Mass., to attend the funeral.

OLD SOLDIER TORTURED.
"For years I suffered unspeakable torture from indigestion, constipation and liver trouble," wrote A. K. Smith, a war veteran at Erie, Pa., "but Dr. King's New Life Pills fixed me all right. They are simply great." Try them for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Only 25c at The Noyes Drug Store. 1-4

NORTH FRYEBURG.
Tressie Walker is helping Mrs. Elwood Bemis with her work.

Mrs. A. E. Gray has been visiting her son Charles at Fryeburg Center a few days last week.
The library rooms in Dr. Mabry's office will be open every Saturday from 2 to 4 o'clock until further notice.
The North Fryeburg Library association held their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. E. W. Jones, Thursday evening, Jan. 12. The officers chosen were:
Pres.—Mrs. Dr. Mabry, V. Pres.—Sadie Flint, Sec.—Mrs. Webb, Treas.—Mrs. George Bradley.

It was not "Mrs. Partington," but some other woman who observed that the Sterling family must have been large and very rich at one time, judging from the great quantity of silverware marked with their name.
Itching Scalp.
Get rid of it in a few hours.
There is nothing made that will so quickly rid the scalp of distressing itching as PARISIAN SAGE, the hair dressing and beautifier.
Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes drug store, guarantees Parisian Sage to cure dandruff, stop itching scalp and falling hair, or money back, and sells it for only 50 cents a large bottle. It puts vitality in the hair and gives it a radiant luster.
It is the favorite hair dressing of refined women because it so quickly refreshes the scalp and not being sticky or greasy is delightful to use.
If you have been bothered with dandruff and itching scalp since I began using Parisian Sage, write to Lona McGough, Witohita Kas, June 8, 1910. 1-3

LOCKE'S MILLS.

The Benefit of the Town.

BY HELOISE E. HERST.

The following Articles are taken from The Women's National Daily.

Part I.

Abby Dean, as every one in Otisfield knew, was one of the most public-spirited women in this place. When the Baptist meeting house needed shingling, it was she who raised the money for it; when Mrs. Martin's two boys had scarlet fever, it was she who helped Mrs. Martin through the two weeks of sleepless nights and anxious days.

In the eventful sixties she was the first to get the people together in Durell's hall, to knit stockings, and roll bandages and pick the lint, which would be the horror of our antiseptic days, and pack all into generous boxes for the soldiers. It was a matter of course that when Nat Sargent was exchanged from Andersonville, the first prisoner the town had seen, he should be settled at once, with all his filth and rags, in Abby's best bedroom, to be nursed back to cleanliness and health.

Abby's best bedroom was no very splendid place. Her husband was the Jack of all trades of the little town, and his wages, as in common with his class, were precarious—quite as often consisting of boxes or an invitation to stay for a boiled dinner as of the quarter dollar which would have been so much more useful. But it seemed hardly worth while to pay a man for fixing the front door lock in ten minutes, even if one had spent more time than that every night for a fortnight in securing the door without it.

But Abby never complained. She had married Leander Dean because she needed somebody to take care of—though she did not know that was the reason. She never saw his shortcomings as a provider for the household. She never bewailed his lack of interest in the public affairs of the village on which her heart was bent. Once—once only—she suffered a keen pang of disappointment in him. It was when she came out of the first rally at the Methodist meeting house, and heard Mrs. John Martin telling her husband, with a sob in her voice, that he and the boys had done just right to enlist, and that she had taken care of a farm before he married her, and he should see that she could do it again.

As Abby walked home beside the rather slender and bent form of Leander, she wished with all her heart that he had felt moved to enlist. But even in that bitter moment she did not suggest to him that he ought to do so. She read St. Paul's epistle too literally for that. Perhaps Leander knew what Abby never would have guessed, that the examining physicians would have put out the fire of his courage, even if he had contrived to kindle it. But to her fond eyes his proprieties were mainly, and his only, the monetary lapse from a dignified bearing, which it was when she first knew him as a boy.

Leander did not go to war, but it must be said that under Abby's able guidance he did good service at home. He was a man of all work for a dozen women whose men folk were on the Potomac. He hoed Mrs. Martin's garden, and milked her cows, and he shoveled snow, and he sat up with the sick, and when, in 1862, after the battle of Shiloh, the melancholy procession of dead soldiers began to make its way to the little village, it was always Leander Dean, who deviously drove the express wagon to the station for the body, and took in charge the details of the funerals—those wonderful war funerals, in which the humblest village of our country poured out all the poetry of their toil-filled lives in honor of the men who had not feared death so much as they loved righteousness.

It was at one of these soldiers' funerals that Abby Dean conceived the idea without which this sketch of her would not have been written. It was a gruesome subject on which she thought, but the passion of work and contrivance which she afterwards put into the fulfillment of her dream would have founded a public library, or established a night school, or built a hall for the presentation of amateur theatricals by summer visitors, and either of these achievements would have reflected more glory upon Abby in the county paper.

It fact, there was something of the ghostly about the labor of love in which she engaged for nearly eight

DOCTORS FAILED. RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me. I saw a testimonial in a Peruna Almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

years; and solemn as the associations were which surrounded it, the neighbors learned to speak with a slight smile of "Abby Dean's hearse." For the desire which entered her heart at Walter Holden's funeral was not less than the town might own a hearse, and cease to carry its dead to the last rest in Mr. Barker's wagon, which was used on other occasions for the distribution of groceries.

Abby had always envied the village of Edes Mills its hearse, and felt it to be a distinct consolation for the loss of a friend there that she should see again the grim vehicle; and the lack of the conventional shield for the sorrow-burden seemed so painful as at Walter Holden's funeral. He was just her age. Their mothers had much of the same day, and on the birthdays during their childhood there had been an interchange of small amenities between the families. That had ceased when Walter went to Hilton Academy, but Walter's hold upon Abby's imagination had never been entirely relaxed.

He grew into a strong, sensible, good man. After his father died, he owned the best farm in the township. He was on the school committee for years and he was town treasurer, too. He married one of the five Littlefield girls, and as it happened, she proved the least capable of that incapable family. Except that Walter's sister lived with him and looked after the house and the dairy, and the delicate twin girl babies, Walter would have been distinctly uncomfortable in his bodily surroundings, however from his heart might have been set on his wife.

He was first volunteer from Otisfield in answer to Lincoln's call for 75,000 men, and he re-enlisted and fought without a wound till the battle of Cold Harbor, in June, 1863. Then he was shot through the shoulder. After enduring amputation of the arm, and wearing through a homesick convalescence, he came back to the farm, this, languid, and with a hacking cough. This developed rapidly into consumption, and he died one December morning—late morning, it chanced—his birthday—of Abby's. Nobody but she remembered the coincidence, however, and she was glad.

Her last prelude to the warmest wraps of the mourners, and chilling the blood of the most vigorous of young men, was a heart almost unbearable. She promised herself that it should be supplied before she died. Perhaps it took in her mind the shape of a sort of memorial to this particular friend of her childhood. More fantastic notions have been entertained in the minds of practical New England women.

The war was nearly over. Less than four months from the day that Walter Holden was buried, Lee surrendered. By the last of May the soldiers who were left to go home to Otisfield, with the thought of their beloved fields in the minds which had been so full of marches and rations and engagements. Many of the men brought a hundred dollars or so in their pockets. All of them, the sick and the well, brought a hot appetite for the simple joys of home life long denied them. Marrying and giving in marriage began speedily to take the place of the heart-breaking ceremonies of the four black years. Weddings crowded upon the grief and constancy of bereavement.

Everybody but Abby Dean forgot that the town would ever again need a hearse. Not so she. She took advantage of the generous temper of returned soldiers to begin her fund for the purchase. The colonel of a Massachusetts regiment stayed at her house over night to break his journey into the lake region of Maine, where it was thought he might get rid of a malaria contracted in the Wilderness. When he went away in the morning he gave Abby a two-dollar greenback. She had never received so much money at one time in her life, and she instantly thought of the money as to the service of her cause.

Soon the "Bears Fund" was recognized as a fact by the neighbors. It was spoken of in town meeting in 1867, and the town voted to appropriate 10 per cent of the poll tax for its increase. But that did not mean more than eleven or twelve dollars a year. Still it was a great deal to feel that there was to be a steady growth in the fund. Mr. Bucknam, the deacon of the Baptist church, offered to take the money as a loan, and allow 6 per cent interest on it. He was highly thought of, and owned the largest store in the place, and did a thriving "variety" business, buying and selling everything from farms to dried apples, and from calicoes to oxen. He died of a sudden stroke of paralysis when the fund had reached about sixty dollars and his estate proved to be strangely involved. Creditors appeared from all over the county, and it soon became evident that Mr. Bucknam's shrewd business sense had failed him in the last years of his life. He had become a silent partner in a fancy stock farm. He had taken mortgages on a number of small, worthless places; and worst of all, he had believed in a scheme for the mining of gems—especially tourmalines—on a neighboring mountain.

In short, the property, which was supposed to be worth twenty-five thousand dollars and thus to represent a fortune in that small town, proved under a forced sale to bring less than half that sum, and to be capable of paying but 40 per cent of the indebtedness. It was a hard blow to Abby to see her sixty-dollar fund reduced to twenty-four dollars by the cruel frankness of the administrator's figures. She regretted for one

Often The Kidneys Are

Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

The Human Body

is just the same now as sixty years ago. Use the remedy that brought good results at that time for there is nothing better. Above all, keep strong in will. When the liver, stomach and bowels fail in their functions, the whole system demands "L.P." Atwood's Medicine.

"I am taking the sixth bottle of your 'L.P.' Atwood's Medicine and am entirely cured of those fearful sick headaches."—M. J. BROOKS. Look for the bird nest "L.P." on the label. At all Dealers, 8c cents for a large bottle.
